Service of Worship

Second Sunday in Advent
December 6, 2009
Eleven o'clock in the morning

∞ Keeping the heart of the University listening to the heart of God ∞

“St. John the Baptist” by Anton Raphael Mengs, c. 1774.

Today we celebrate the second Sunday in Advent. The scripture passages this morning from Malachi and Luke both emphasize repentance. In Malachi, the Lord is likened to a refiner’s fire, purifying and transforming the people of Israel to ready them to encounter God. Luke’s gospel tells of John the Baptist preaching repentance in the wilderness and calling people to “prepare the way of the Lord!” The liturgical color of Advent is purple, which denotes penitence, a suitable mode for preparation to meet God.

At the close of today's service, the Lord's Supper will be celebrated in the Memorial Chapel located to the left of the chancel. Immediately following the Lord's Supper, a service of prayer for healing will also be held. The service consists of prayers for healing and wholeness, with anointing and laying on of hands. All are invited.

The congregation is asked to remain silent during the prelude as a time of prayer and meditation.

THANKSGIVING

This morning we give thanks for the Department of Philosophy. We celebrate its reasoned reflection on the soundness of and interconnections among various kinds of thinking. We recognize the way philosophers have enriched faith and also posed serious questions to particular aspects of belief and to belief itself. The ushers bring forward a copy of Plato's Republic to the altar.

In Durham, we give thanks for those with mental and those with physical disabilities, and those who accompany them along their way. Congregation member Gabriel Tempest brings forward a piece of his artwork.
