Service of Worship

Fifth Sunday of Easter

April 20, 2008

Eleven o'clock in the morning

≈ Keeping the heart of the University listening to the heart of God ≈

Original frame of Coventry Cathedral which was largely destroyed in WWII.

What does it mean to be a Christian community? As we move deeper into the season of Easter, the scriptures reflect on this question. The lesson from Acts describes the martyrdom of Stephen, which reminds us that persecution is often part of the Christian faith. In the John's gospel, Jesus himself as the way, the truth, and the life, as he invites his disciples to participate in this way. In 1 Peter, the author speaks of disciples as living stones who will be gathered and bound together for the building of a spiritual house—the Church. Churches are not simply places of aesthetic beauty, but a building of living and active stones. The stones of the ruined Coventry Cathedral, pictured above, continue to cry out in living testimony to cross and resurrection.

DUKE UNIVERSITY CHAPEL

Duke Chapel is a grand building, suitable for hosting major events in the life of the University and its members; it acts as a moderator for the diversity of religious identity and expression on campus; and it is a Christian church of an unusually interdenominational character, with a tradition of stirring music, preaching, and liturgy. We welcome you to our life of worship, learning, dialogue, and service.

THANKSGIVING

This morning we give thanks for the department of Art and Art History. We celebrate how it gives concrete form to the imagination through the production of art, while also demonstrating the profound ways that artwork both reflects and speaks to social and cultural contexts. A representative brings a book of sacred art to the altar.

In Durham, we lift up those who suffer from depression, loneliness, or quiet desperation. A representative brings forward a personal journal.
